From the Editor's Desk

We are very happy to publish first issue of Research Process; an international journal of social research foundation. It is an initiative of social research foundation to promote and to communicate with larger audience, social scientist, researcher, students and activists. Especially our aim is to give a forum for the young scientists at global level. Another objective is to spread scientific knowledge to the society and eradicate the ignorance of mankind. For these purpose I appreciate the efforts taken by our foundations members. Especially, I am very thankful to my esteemed teacher Dr. D.D. Kachole for his inspiration. It was his dream to establish a worldwide forum for the researches from Aurangabad city and now I think he will be happy with this effort.

For this issue the editorial board decided that the theme will be structural transformation in society and regarding this theme the editorial board selected articles are being published here. As we know that social change is transforming the global societies, disparities in various sectors in society, rise of new middle classes worldwide, marginalization of people, liberalizing marriage mores, changing family relations, upcoming culture of consumerism, changing civil values, identities of the local communities are going under threat. These are the consequences of globalization which results in structural transformation in societies. In this issue, we have organised Nine articles focus on various issues regarding structural transformation in societies.

I express my sincere gratitude to the members of editorial board for the accepting our invitation and work with us. My special thanks go to Professor Edgard Lite (Rio, Brazil) and Professor PKB Nayar (Trivandrum) for their valuable guidance. I am also thankful to all contributors for sharing their work. I hope all the audience may get advantage from this initiative.

Sanjay B. Salunke
